CHICAGO'S GANG WARFARE BREAKS OUT IN DU PAGE

Body of Man, a Supposed Victim of Booze War, is Found

Chicago, May 14—(AP)—The roar of gangsters' guns, stifled in Cook County since the drive on crime resulting from the McSwiggan slaying, apparently has broken out in DuPage County, just across the border.

Officials of the neighboring county today were investigating the slaying of a headstrong man about 55 years old, whose body, with a bullet hole through the head, was found in a railroad yard near West Chicago, about 25 miles from Chicago.

Local officials were convinced the man was slain in a booze feud, as the body was found near a spot recently used, according to rumor, by Chicago alcohol feudists to practice with their machine guns.

An apparent effort had been made to conceal the identity of the man who evidently had been shot after he had been severely beaten. His legs and arms had been broken and his face and body bruised. Finding of valuable in the man's pockets disposed of the robbery theory.

While attempts were being made to solve the new mystery, prosecutors in charge of the Chicago crime grand jury and the jury at Joliet which is investigating the murder of Deputy Warden Klein at Stateville Prison were continuing their inquiries today with the view of aiding each other insofar as facts disclosed by one jury might be helpful to the other.

The decision to thus coordinate was reached at a conference attended here last night by Oscar Carlstrom, state Attorney General, State's Attorney Crowe of Chicago and State's Attorney Rehn of Joliet. Mr. Carlstrom is assisting Mr. Crowe in the inquiry here while Mr. Rehn is in charge of the investigation resulting from the slaying of the prison official by seven escaping convicts last week.

Charged With Murder
The Chicago Journal today says that the seven convicts who escaped from the new Stateville Penitentiary on May 5 after killing Deputy Warden Peter Klein, have been named in true bills voted by the grand jury at Joliet.

Five of the convicts have been caught, one of them having been severely wounded by a posse in effecting his capture near Streator, Ill. Two of the fugitives, James Price, a robber from Winnebago County, and Charles Duschowsky, a murderer from Chicago, still are at large with no definite trace of them so far as is known.

Lack of Athletes May Prevent Relay Event
Coach A. C. Bowers of the Dixon high school is not certain that a relay race between the Sterling and Dixon high schools will be held next Tuesday, despite reports that all arrangements for such an event have been completed. Insufficient interest among the Dixon students is given as one of the chief causes, and coupled with this, it is said that there are not enough athletes here to carry out the proposed race.

To make such an event a success, it would be necessary to have a field of 25 contestants from each school, the runners to be relieved at the end of each half mile. This season there has been a falling off in the candidates for track and field events, and those who are interested are working for the Rock River conference meet to be held here this month.

HEADS OF ASHTON AND AMBOY SCHOOLS TO GO TO STERLING AND ROCK FALLS NEXT FALL

Fackler to Union Dist. and Robertson to Rock Falls

Sterling—The board of education of district No. 11, comprising the Central and Lincoln schools, has accepted the application of Prof. C. A. Fackler of Ashton as superintendent of the two schools, succeeding Prof. C. E. Selby, who will head the Mt. Morris grade schools next year.

Prof. Fackler has been superintendent of the Ashton school, including the grades from primary up and also the Ashton high school, for the past 11 years. Before going to Ashton he was superintendent of the Erie schools, including the high school, for several years.

The new superintendent is 52 years of age and has two daughters, both grown to young womanhood, one of them married and living near Ashton and the other being a member of the faculty of Mt. Morris college. His contract here will take effect August 1, and it is expected that Prof. and Mrs. Fackler will move their household goods here about that time.

Choice Was Unanimous
The choice of Prof. Fackler was unanimous on the part of the local school board, and he stated in his application that he would come only at the unanimous call of the entire board. His academic preparation is entirely satisfactory to the board, and he has continued post graduate studies at the University of Illinois during several summers. His reason for leaving Ashton is his desire to locate in a larger city, with larger schools and accompanying advantages offered by a community the size of the Twin Cities.

The board received between 65 and 70 applications for the position of superintendent of schools, some from teachers in larger cities and others from smaller places. Many excellent references and good records were investigated, but Prof. Fackler's known personality, ability and accomplishments made the most favorable impression.

Former Erie people who knew of his work there credit Prof. Fackler with starting the progressive growth of the Erie high school along the most approved modern lines, which was later continued by Prof. R. M. Robertson, now at Amboy and who has been engaged to head the faculty of the Rock Falls high school.

Objections Overruled.
All objections to local improvement ordinance No. 222, which provides for about three miles of paving in the west end of the city, were overruled by Judge William L. Leach in the county court yesterday. A very small number of objections was represented. The matter of benefits to be derived by the Illinois Central railroad company, in this ordinance, is to be presented to the court Monday.

"BABY FARM" IN PEORIA CO. IS UNDER SCRUTINY

State's Attorney is Investigating Deaths of Two Babies

Peoria, Ill., May 14—(AP)—A mysterious "baby farm" that uses the telephone in the dead of night to arrange for placing its little charges with childless persons is being sought by State's Attorney H. E. Pratt. Investigation started yesterday after a two-months-old boy had been found dead in a vacant house in East Peoria apparently having died without medical attention.

State's Attorney Pratt today ordered the return of Mr. and Mrs. M. Cramer, Florence Hall and Jack Meyers from Tazewell County to Peoria for questioning in connection with the inquiry.

Told of Babe's Death.
Mrs. Cramer told the police today that her own child died in St. Francis Hospital here and that she put an ad in the newspapers stating she wished to adopt a baby. She received a telephone call and was told a child would be left at her home, she says. That day a beautiful baby was left at her home. The baby was apparently in ill health she says, so she decided to move into East Peoria where she thought the air would be purer. But the baby continued to grow worse and though attended by a physician, died Tuesday. Mrs. Cramer says that the loss of the second child affected her so much that she closed her rented home in East Peoria and told a neighbor to notify the coroner of the child's death.

The state's attorney does not believe that Florence Hall or Jack Meyers knew of any baby farm, if such existed, but wishes to question them. He does think that there is a "baby farm" in Peoria county and that whoever called Mrs. Cramer in response to the ad in the paper is connected with the organization conducting the "farm."

BRITAIN BEGINS TO IMPROVE FROM STRIKE TROUBLES

Railroad Strike Settled and Plan for Coal Miners is Ready

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Premier Baldwin announced in the House of Commons today that he had prepared proposals, which in his opinion formed a reasonable and fair basis for settlement of the coal dispute.

He has come to the conclusion, the Premier continued, that there was no possibility of the two parties to the coal dispute coming to an agreement between themselves.

The proposals which he had prepared, would be handed to the miners and coal owners immediately for their consideration over the weekend.

The Premier said J. H. Thomas, the railway men's secretary, had telephoned that he hoped by the time Mr. Baldwin made his statement in the House, a settlement could be effected regarding the railways which he believed would be satisfactory to all parties.

Official announcement that the railway strike has been settled was made this afternoon.

Conditions Better.
A spokesman for the trades union congress announced this afternoon that there had been considerable easing in the industrial situation throughout the country. The report was based on telegrams from the general secretaries of the T. U. C. in various sections including Scotland.

Trade remained badly dislocated, and it was everywhere realized that the difficult problem of a restoration of the nation's normal life would be extremely slow, particularly because of the necessity to thresh out the controversy between the trade union and employers association over the reinstatement of the men who quit their jobs when the general strike was called.

Much anxiety prevailed over the reinstatement which has been injected into the situation by the decision of the employers. A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners federation, is authority for the statement that the strike has been converted into a general lockout through the announced declaration of some of the employers that they will re-employ their old hands only under conditions.

Booze-Maker Gets a Warrant on Release From Co. Jail

Albert Tate, Rockford, field secretary for the anti-saloon league of Illinois was held under $500 bond on a larceny charge before Justice George Howe of Morrison, charged with the theft of a dog from a bootlegger.

Tate is at present out under $500 continuance bonds.

The charge of stealing the dog, a valuable coach puppy, was brought by Charles Dickey of Rock Falls, immediately after his release from Whiteside county jail after a thirty days term for selling hooch.

Charges Theft of Dog.
Dickey charges that the dog was stolen while he was in jail.

According to the charges filed at Morrison, Tate took the coach puppy from Dickey's kennels and made off with him. A woman witness appeared in justice court yesterday to corroborate this. Dickey says the dog was taken May 7 and that he acted immediately after his release from jail May 11.

A warrant charging larceny was sworn out by Dickey and Deputy J. W. Kelly went to Rockford and arrested Tate. He was taken to Morrison where the hearing was held and where he entered a denial to the theft.

He admitted having the coach puppy, which was found on his premises, according to Deputy Kelly but claimed it had been given him. He asked a continuance, saying that he had a witness who was now in Oklahoma who would testify that the dog was given him.

Justice Howe allowed ten days continuance but made the dry worker give $500 bond.

According to Dickey the coach puppy is worth $50 and is a month and a half old.

DAWN OF FOURTH DAY SEES WORLD WAITING MESSAGE

Amundsen and Party May be Lost in Unexplored Ocean

BULLETIN
Nome, Alaska, May 14—Nome still remained uninformed as to the whereabouts of the dirigible Norge plover here at 3 o'clock this morning eastern standard time.

Seattle, Wash., May 14—(AP)—Dawning of the fourth day since the dirigible Norge left King's Bay, Spitzbergen, to fly across the North Pole toward Nome, Alaska, saw the world anxiously awaiting word from her.

Chief operators of Alaskan naval radio stations spent another night listening for word of the great airship, carrying Captain Roald Amundsen and his 17 companions. A message sent from an unidentified station was the only word of the Norge that broke through the veil of silence which has covered her whereabouts.

The naval radio compass station at Hinchinbrook Island near Cordova, Alaska, reported to The Associated Press this morning that it had picked up a mysterious message saying that the Norge had passed Point Barrow, the northern tip of Alaska, at noon eastern standard time.

Due at 8 Last Night
The distance from Point Barrow to Nome is 550 miles, an eleven hour voyage for the dirigible. Thus at 8 o'clock last night, eastern standard time, she should have reached Nome if the unconfirmed radio message was true.

Radio efforts to reach the Norge have been particularly thorough. Three stations, those at St. Paul's Island, Seward and Hinchinbrook, reported hearing the Norge simultaneously about 1 a. m. yesterday eastern standard time, but nothing has been heard since. On Wednesday and Thursday, the Norge was called by all naval radio stations in Alaska throughout the night, one each of the four wave lengths the dirigible is using.

Watch Maintained
Advices received here by the Associated Press at 7 a. m. today, eastern time at Hinchinbrook Island, near Cordova, Alaska, said that station had intercepted a message from an unknown station to the effect that the airship Norge had passed over Point Barrow at 8 a. m. yesterday, Pacific Coast Time. The message added that all aboard were well. All radio stations in Alaska redoubled their efforts to communicate with the Norge.

The heads of the naval stations personally kept watch throughout the night. All traffic has been ordered to suspend for any word of the dirigible.

Two young women from Zeeland, in LaSalle County, experienced a chilly nights' outing in an automobile, which because stranded south of Dixon on route 2 about midnight. The young women met two Rockford young men in Peru last evening, according to their story. They had known the young men but a short time, and accepted an invitation to ride to Mendota to a dance.

The gasoline supply became exhausted about three miles south of Dixon and the four young people prepared to wait until morning for aid. Mrs. Butterbaugh was formerly Miss Bertha Lehman, daughter of Mrs. Mary Lehman of Franklin Grove. Mr. Butterbaugh is home in near Polo, Ill. While in service he had charge of the building operations in our India missions, says Rev. O. D. Buck of Franklin Grove, in addition to his other work.

The missionary committee of the Brethren church at Franklin Grove has planned a special program in honor of their home coming to be held at the Brethren church Sunday, May 16.

A BATHROOM ON WHEELS

Every home owner in Dixon will be interested in seeing the remarkable traveling exhibit of plumbing fixtures and materials which is to visit this city Saturday, and shown at Third street and Galena avenue. Housed in a big special body built on a motor truck of 198-inch wheelbase is a varied and interesting display of the latest designs in bathroom, kitchen and laundry equipment. Thousands of people have examined this free exhibit along its route from city to city, and have carried away practical ideas and suggestions for the improvement of their homes.

In this way the eighth graders will get a good idea of the workings of the high school classes, of which they will be members next year, and the experiences of the past in other schools.

proves that such associations previous to their high school entrance are very beneficial, relieving much of the embarrassment of the first days in high school.

CHAMBERVILLE SOCIAL CIRCLE.
The members of the Chamberville Social Circle will hold an all-day meeting next Wednesday at the home of Mrs. F. S. Royer on Broadway, Sterling.

Toastmasters Heard of Chicken Club Work

At the Toastmasters' Club last evening, J. N. Weiss, Chairman of the Chicken Club project, announced that there are now over 500 eggs out among farm boys and that the Toastmasters' Club members have been detailed to these boys. Each member will make his first visit to the boy that he is sponsoring within a month from now to make his inspection, as well as get acquainted with his boy. As has been stated in this column before, this project has gone over far beyond the fondest hopes of the committee and not only the boys but also the men are enthusiastic over the idea of encouraging the boys of the county in the raising of prize poultry.

At last night's meeting, a splendid lesson in parliamentary law and the use of the vote was given by Rev. A. W. Carlson and W. S. Wallace. Interesting talks were also made by Rev. W. W. Marshall and B. J. Frazer.

Next Thursday will be the last meeting of the season for this club before the big ladies' night to be held in Lowell Park, on May 27th.

The Amboy club closed their activities for this season last evening with a splendid ladies' night affair, held in the Commercial Club rooms. One of the members of that club this morning said that the Amboy Club is on a very firm foundation and every indication points to a membership of at least 50 for next fall. At present they have around 24 members. The Sterling club will hold meetings until the end of this month before closing for the summer.

Postponed Games Must be Played Next Week

The Boys' Grade School base ball league will play their games today as scheduled unless rain prevents. In that event, the managers and captains will make arrangements to have the games played off before next Friday, the 21st. Captains and managers please take note of this.

Former Physical Dir. Must Have "Reformed"

A letter was received by the Secretary of the "Y" yesterday from the former Physical Director, E. L. Kuhn. Mr. Kuhn is now located in Cumberland, Maryland, as Physical Director in a new Y. M. C. A., which was erected by that city at a cost of $450,000 about a year ago. Kuhn reports splendid success all along the line with gym classes steadily increasing.

He has evidently changed his ways from his professed bachelorhood days, for he states in the letter, "Last Sunday a young lady, my Ford and myself, drove out to our summer camp site about 22 miles from here, on the south branch of the Potomac river." He goes on to say that his summer camp in his estimation does not come up to the Dixon camps.

THE STORY THUS FAR—The scene is the England of Richard I. A party of knights, en route to a tournament, visits Cedric the Saxon, their leader, Brian the Templar, incurring Cedric's wrath by his admiration of Cedric's daughter, Rowena. One of the party, disguised as a palmer,

RADUALLY THE RANKS OF THE EMBATTLED KNIGHTS THINNED OUT. THEN IT WAS OBSERVED THAT THE DISHERITED KNIGHT AND BOIS-GUILBERT WERE ONCE MORE IN COMBAT. Punished for Mishap

Washington, May 13—(AP)—Secretary Wilbur has approved court martial sentences involving losses of 30 numbers for Commander Louis Gulliver and 20 numbers for Lieut. William Melk Beifel, captain and navigator of the Collier Orion, which grounded at the entrance of Chesapeake Bay last December. The ship was badly damaged and is still awaiting repairs.

The finding of the court held that the ship had turned northward too soon after clearing the harbor entrance, in view of the heavy sea running and her deep draft.

BANKING BILL PASSED

Washington, May 13—(AP)—The Senate today passed the McPadden branch banking bill as rewritten by its banking committee.

The measure was passed without a record vote and now goes to conference where a stubborn fight is anticipated over the Hull amendment, which would restrict national banks in establishing branches.

As drawn, the measure was designed to place national and state banks on an equal footing as to branch banking.

Good Thoughts for Good People

Isaiah tells how the carpenter, the goldsmith and other workers helped one another, and "every one said to his brother, Be of good courage." If workers together in these days would only preserve such a mental attitude and, with the helping hand, use that simple salutation, what great progress and happiness would be achieved in all tasks involved in meeting the needs of mankind.

The Christian Science Monitor. By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another.

Christ Jesus. Men's hearts ought not to be set against one another, but set with one another, and all against the evil thing only.

Carlyle. Thy burden hard and heavy? Do thy steps drag wearily? Help to bear thy brother's burden. God will bear both it and thee.

Elizabeth Charles. Heaven's help is better than early rising.

Cervantes. Thus saith God the Lord, he that created the heavens, and stretched them out; he that spread forth the earth, and that which cometh out of it; he that giveth breath unto the people upon it, and spirit to them that walk therein: I the Lord have called thee in righteousness, and will hold thee in hand, and will keep thee.

Isaiah. IT MAY BE GLORIOUS—OR MISERABLE.

It's a glorious thing to awake with a lively, healthy, energetic body. It is miserable to drag an aching, tired, weary body from a restless bed. The chances are that impaired kidney and bladder action has failed to clear the blood stream of lurking poisons which cause the distressing aches. Foley Pills, a diuretic stimulant for the kidneys, constantly used over 25 years, are a reliable, valuable medicine that promotes healthful, normal action of kidneys and bladder. Cost little. ## SUBLETTE NEWS

Sublette—The Annual business meeting of the Union church will be held Friday evening at 7:30. All members and officers are urged to attend and the officers are requested to bring their reports.

Tuesday morning the Sells-Sterling show rolled through our village on rubber wheels following the cement road from Mendota northward. One of our citizens recalled the time when things were quite different from what they are today. In those good old days, circus wagons were drawn by horses, driven by men who made the air blue with profanity as they urged their tired teams through the almost bottomless mud, for it was always muddy when the circus came through Sublette. That was one morning when the fathers did not have to call the children. They were on hand to see the first wagons loaded with canvas and poles and longingly lingered on the streets till after the camels and elephants were out of sight. Some of the conditions of those earlier days we would like to recall, but when it comes to the matter of road we would choose present conditions.

The following ladies returned to their homes from the hospital with their babies: Mrs. Louis Tower of Dixon; Mrs. Canute Eide of Marselles; and Mrs. Robert Thresher.

Mrs. Sullivan who has been in the hospital for a couple of weeks returned to her home Saturday very much improved in health.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Coenen of Mendota have a twilight sleep baby boy born May 7 at the Angear hospital.

Gilbert Butler, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Butler is a patient in the hospital, very sick with lobar pneumonia. Mrs. Dickinson of Amboy is the special nurse.

Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Gustafson of Madison have a twilight sleep baby boy born May 9 at the Angear hospital.

Mrs. McGonigle of Tiskilwa is a patient in the hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Conant of Dover have a twilight sleep baby boy born May 10 at the Angear hospital.

Mrs. Hopkins will preach Sunday in the absence of Rev. Hopkins who will graduate from the Northern Baptist Theological Seminary of Chicago May 21.

Mr. and Mrs. William Mondlock and baby son of Dixon spent Sunday at the home of their mother, Mrs. McCalvin.

Mrs. Mary Daubler and son Arthur Daubler and Mr. and Mrs. Samples and Mrs. H. Newton of Aurora and Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Paige of Mendota spent Sunday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. N. Paige.

Mrs. Elijah Lovering, formerly Dorothea Lucas, passed away at her home Saturday afternoon at 5:45 o'clock at the age of 76 years, 11 months and 23 days. Death was caused from hardening of the arteries. She was born in Clarion township, May 15, 1849, and has lived in this vicinity the greater part of her life. She was united in marriage to Elijah Lovering Jan. 20, 1869 and was the mother of five children, which she leaves to mourn her death as follows: Mrs. Ida L. Palmer of Dixon, Mrs. Vilva A. Voorhes of Chicago, Mrs. Elsie E. McNinch, of Sublette, Mrs. Hallie H. Eddy of Dixon and Leroy P. Lovering of Sublette. She also leaves to mourn her loss, 27 grandchildren and 22 great grandchildren to whom she was very dear. Mrs. Lovering was a member of the Congregational church, having been united with that faith March 27, 1887, and at one time held the office of church treasurer. She with Mr. Lovering attended the last meeting of the church when it disbanded. Neighbors and friends extend their heart felt sympathy to the bereaved. The funeral services were held at the Union church Tuesday afternoon with burial at the Clapp cemetery. The relatives from out of town who attended the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Palmer, Darrell Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Rhoades and family, Mr. and Mrs. Eddy and daughter of Mrs. Louis Eddy and daughter of Dixon; Mr. and Mrs. Ed Tewell and children and Sam Englin and children of Rock Falls; Mr. and Mrs. John Maloy and children of Compton; Mr. and Mrs. Frank Voorhes and daughter Dorothy of Chicago; Mrs. Mark Duffy of Freeport; Mrs. Vivian Ankeney of Chicago and Mr. and Mrs. George White of Churbin, Iowa.

You Pay

No more, no less . . . but Quaker Oats has the flavor

THE difference in breakfast oats is in their flavor. The price mostly is the same.

Millions demand the Quaker brand because of its toasty, wonderful flavor. For flavor is the important point in food.

Some 50 years were spent perfecting that famous Quaker flavor. Once you taste it, you are spoiled for ordinary oats.

Quaker milling, too, retains much of the "bulk" of oats. And that makes laxatives less often needed. Protein, carbohydrates and vitamins and "bulk" are thus combined to make Quaker Oats an excellently balanced ration.

Get Quick Quaker (cooks in 3 to 5 minutes) or Quaker Oats today at your grocer. See how much finer tomorrow's breakfast will be than today's.

Why Girls Go Back Home

BY CATHARINE BRODY

Copyright 1926 by Warner Bros. Pictures Inc.
"Why Girls Go Back Home" with Patsy Ruth Miller is a Warner production from this novel.

SYNOPSIS

Marie Downey, innocently involved in scandal by Clifford Dudley, an actor-come-to-stardom because of the notoriety. John, a former sweetheart, writes that he believes in her. Marie, tasting success, puts him off. Three years she lives with Sally, her chum, a gay life. She invites Clifford to her birthday party and revenges herself by making a fool of him in front of the guests. John, an unannounced visitor, blunders unseen within earshot, but mistakes Marie's kidding of Clifford for realism.

CHAPTER XI—(Continued)

A few steps away was the dark window to the alcove. The group was already surging through the other window, onto the landing and stairs, surrounding Clifford, who was trying to make his way down. Marie took a few steps along the balcony to the other window, hung herself through it and sank into a chair, burying her face in her hands.

For a full minute she sat thus, heavy at heart over her poor little revenge, ashamed, nauseated by the loud voices and heated faces. Some quality in the darkness made her feel at last that she was not alone. She raised her face to a ghostly form in the chair opposite, with white face watching her.

She opened her mouth for a scream, and it failed to come. She could only breathe:

"What is it? Who?"

No answer.

She rose, half expecting ghostly hands to pull her back, feeling for the switch on the wall. There was light. And she saw John, motionless, with grim lips, staring at her. She fell into her chair. It was enough for her just to look at him.

Her father had dragged her in.

John, just as she remembered him. And how he had come there, and why he had come there, she did not even question.

A little smile trembled about her lips. She took a full and happy breath, recovering herself.

"So, it's you, John! Why didn't you tell me—write me—oh, there are a million things I want to ask, John, dear! You had to come to me, didn't you? It's a dream. Come here, I want to feel if it's a dream."

"Dreams!" she started at the harshness of his voice. "What do you know about them? You're a great actress!"

Marie gave him a clear glance. There was a little amusement in it, too, and rising excitement. To think that John had come out of the air, like this, was sitting before her, and had still the power, which she had half suspected, to rouse this excitement in her.

"Oh, no," she said gently, "I'm not a great actress. You know better than that. I'm just Marie. I've had a rotten time, John. It's been fun too, but it's been mostly rotten. I never knew how much I wanted to tell everything to you—just as I used to—"

"I don't want to hear your secrets," cried John, rising. "I can guess. I've seen."

"You've seen. What do you mean by that?"

"You and Clifford Dudley—these drunken people—"

"Oh, poor Clifford Dudley—that's nothing—"

"No, I suppose it's nothing to you. You've kissed so many men and laughed at them that one more—"

"Look here, John, you don't know anything about that. It was a joke—a joke, don't be silly and foolish and jealous, dear. Come here—I'll tell you about it."

"Jealous? Jealous of what? Of course, it was a joke. It's all a joke to you, and to me now. How could I be jealous of a—of a—no better than a prostitute?"

The last word was a sort of bliss.

He was startled by his voice, and for a minute did not believe he could have said such a thing. Then he saw Marie's face, the tightened lips, and blazing eyes. He felt them quite close to him coming nearer, though she stood motionless away from him. He put up his hands instinctively in a motion of defense. His voice died away.

"That's what your father calls you. That's what all Winesville calls you."

"Does he? Do they?" said Marie with deadly calm. "I'll show them. And I'll show you, too, John Ross, what they'll call me."

"And now, please go out of my house. You're too good for it—for the house of a—"

He made a forward motion, in agony, to keep back the ugly word. But Marie finished unmoved.

"A prostitute."

He bent his head and pushed aside the curtains, went out into the landing and down the stairs. Marie, left standing, with narrowed eyes and clenched hands, banged a little fist on the back of the chair.

"I'll teach them what to call me—I'll teach them—the—the—"

She ran upstairs to her sitting room, flung open the door, and made for her desk. There on top of her daily mail lay a letter which had come that morning from Winesville. An ironic smile played about Marie's mouth as she looked down on it.

"I'll show them—the beast! They'll call me anything I like—they'll—"

For no reason at all, she suddenly collapsed on the desk, sobbing.

"Oh, John, John—" she cried.

CHAPTER XII

It was madness. Sally had said so, outraged. The producer of Marie's show had treated her to a lecture on the temperaments of actresses, which still burned in her ears. So did his threats. It was madness to risk everything that she had won for herself through so much agony of mind and bitterness and anxiety simply to make an unimportant man called John Ross, an unimportant town called Winesville eat its words. But as Marie had told Sally grimly, while her maid packed bags and the telephone jangled incessantly and the producer raved downstairs and Sally raved upstairs:

"I'm going to make that town eat out of my hand if it's the last thing I do on this earth. And as for my career, you know very well, Sally, that I haven't any career. I fell into this somehow, and if I fall out again it's small loss to the world and to me. I'll be the rage for a few more years and then what? I'll get bored and get married and get more bored and get divorced. And there'll be other Marie Downeys, and I'll sit up nights wondering whether my show'll be a success and worrying because I'm getting older every minute. Ambition! Ugh, I've nothing to be ambitious for!"

"Marie," cried Sally, "you aren't thinking seriously of staying in Winesville—"

"I'm not thinking seriously of anything. But I want to go home. I want to see how it feels again. I'm tired. I haven't missed a night at the show in years. I won't kill you all if I take a week off."

"There's something," said Sally somberly, "back of this."

And Sally, thought Marie all through the night that express rushed from Pittsburgh to Winesville, Sally was right. If she had been able to see into Marie's mind, would she have thought her madder than ever, or would—really—mad? Marie could not make up her mind, but it amused her to cogitate upon it. If Sally could feel her nostalgia, could feel the strength of the tie which revolted at being cut and which dragged her from New York to Winesville and John, would Sally then consider her mad?

She was the only person to leave the train at Winesville. The porter set her bags out on an empty platform, and Marie, stepping out, could see no one about for what seemed miles and miles. But how good and crisp the early spring air felt, and how gently the sunshine touched her. She drew a breath that was really a sigh. It was so peaceful. Then, noticing the station agent's head crowded in the window and peering at her, she lifted the heavy bags and made off as quickly as she could. It was only a step from the station to the hotel.

"Why didn't father meet me, though," she wondered, and felt a little depressed. "He must have my wire."

But Joseph Downey did meet her. He met her in agitation at the door of the hotel and fairly dragged her inside past the usual group of idlers, who dropped their whistling of the hotel posts and rapped, past a traveling salesman, who was sitting near the new plate glass window, and who rose to his feet.

CHAPTER XL

"Do you mean he's given up his job?" asked Audrey.

Morton nodded. "Said he was a failure at everything. But the thing that seemed to be hurting him most was that you didn't like him."

"Stop worrying about him now, and let's get something to eat," he glanced at her shrewdly from beneath his lashes. Audrey did not answer.

Over the luncheon table in an exclusive tea room, she leaned toward him, her face very grave. "Will you let me one single thing that I am good for, Daddy?"

Morton glanced up from his plate. "Now what, Audrey?"

She flushed. "Oh, I know I'm always fussing around and worrying you, but honestly, Daddy, it seems to me nowadays that my life isn't worth living."

"I haven't any work in the world. I don't even manage your house. I'm not much good on the stage, and I hate social life. And I make every body miserable who comes in touch with me."

"I'm just a fungus growth, clinging around your money and position, and not contributing a thing to the world I live in."

Morton spoke gravely. "You do contribute, Audrey, you contribute to my happiness. I have lived for you ever since you were a little child. Can't you just be happy in my love?"

"I love you too, daddy, but you get more happiness from Nona and these other women than you do from me. If it were otherwise, you'd marry me, and let me really take care of you and be somebody in the world, instead of a useless parasite."

"Listen, Audrey. You mustn't talk any more about marriage to me. If you want to manage the house, I'll fire the housekeeper, and let you do it."

"No," she said shortly, "that's useless."

Nona's show had opened. In the wings the manager, the director and the producer were exchanging congratulations. Their eyes were heavily smudged with fatigue, but also glistening with satisfaction.

In Nona's dressing room, Morton sat quietly, while Nona stretched herself out on a chaise longue, her eyes closed and her face drawn.

"You are a very great dancer, Nona," he said, "and will be a very famous one."

Nona opened her eyes and an anxious look came over her face. "Are you glad, dear?"

"Of course, I am," he said. "Do you know that Sunshine means to back me for an opening in London next fall, if this play holds up?"

"Yes," said Morton. "He told me. Nona looked at him between narrowed lids. "And you still hope it will be a success, and that I'll cross the ocean and never see you any more, for months and months, or years and years, maybe?"

Morton crossed the dressing room and stood beside her. "Nona, dear, it's work that counts in this world. I know, because I've been searching for happiness elsewhere, and it simply isn't to be found."

"We don't get anywhere, with this love business, do we?" said Nona wearily. "I love you, you don't love me. Ditto Audrey. John Parrish loves her, and she doesn't love him—or thinks she doesn't."

"He loves her all right," Morton replied. "You should have seen his face when he said he was quitting his job."

Nona stood up and laid her hands on Morton's shoulders. "Harry, I'm sorry for that boy, because I know what it means, to be in love with someone who doesn't love you. It's a hell of a job."

"Even if I become a second Pavlov, I'll never be happy, just because you don't love me. What I want is not public success, but a home, love, contentment. Won't you let me stay with you, Harry?"

Her tired face, with its smudges and streaks of make-up looked almost grotesque under the bright light. Her lips quivering like a small child's.

"Nona," he began. "I've been fond of you—you're good, Nona. Regard less of conventional rules for good news, you are a mighty fine person. You've helped me a lot, and you've helped others. I found you at a time when I sorely needed just the human sympathy that you gave me."

"But marriage—well, it just isn't in the cards for me. Can't you be happy without that? Can't you throw yourself into your new success and make work your life? I did it, Nona, when fate had hit me pretty hard, and I know it can be done."

The girl collapsed in the chaise longue, and covered her face with her hands. Great silent sobs shook her body and she buried her face in the cushions.

"Nona," he began. But the door opened, and Abe Sunshine walked in. He took in the situation at a glance, and gave Morton a hostile look. Then he crossed to Nona, and began to pat her shoulder. "What's this, my little Nona in tears on the proudest night of her life! Listen, girl, this won't do. Why, Nona, you were a wow, tonight! Don't go spoiling your looks for tomorrow's show, by crying. What's the matter, anyhow?" He gave Morton another angry glance.

Nona did not answer him, but only twined her shoulder away from the hand with which he was trying clumsily to comfort her.

"You're tired out, old kid," he went on. "But if there's anything else on your mind, tell old Abe, and he'll make it right. Remember, kid you and I've got to stick together from now on. Our success and plenty of mazzina depends on it."

Morton intervened. "I'll take Miss Nona home in my car. She's exhausted from excitement. And she needs quiet and sleep."

"I haven't shed any tears," said Nona. "But I wish I could. I feel as if I were going to burst with misery."

Morton picked Nona up and wrapped her cloak around her. "Powder your nose, my dear, and we'll go home. The stage entrance will be thronged with Johnnies who mustn't see your nose red."

"I haven't shed any tears," said Nona. "But I wish I could. I feel as if I were going to burst with misery."

Morton sighed. "I wish to heaven I knew what to do for you women," he said. "I try all the time to make you happy and to make Audrey happy, and you're both wretched."

Nona gave a tremulous little laugh. "That's because we both want to marry you. It's a fine state of affairs, isn't it? And there's nothing you can do."

He put his arm around Nona, as they pushed through the crowd at the stage door, and Nona wearily pulled a veil over her face to shield it from the leering gaze of the men who waited there.

When the car drew up before Nona's apartment house, Morton kissed her, and she clung to him with renewed ardor. But he gently unlaced her fingers from his coat and took her up the steps. "Try to sleep, my dear. Things will look better in the morning."

She nodded hopelessly, as she stepped inside the door.

Stepping into the car again, he bade the chauffeur drive through the park for a while. The windows of the tonneau were open and the cool spring air blew in and fanned his face. Morton lit a cigarette and leaned back on the cushions.

The park drives were deserted, save for his car, and the slopes of grass were silver green under the half moon.

After a while, his body relaxed and he ordered the driver to turn toward home.

The apartment was quite dark when he entered. Seeing Audrey's cape lying on a chair, he knew that she had come straight home from the theater, when he remained to visit Nona in her dressing room.

As he went up the stairs, he tried not to make any noise, lest he wake her. But the rooms resounded with his footsteps. Just outside the door of his own room, he hesitated. There was a faint sound within, as though someone were breathing very fast and hard.

Morton cautiously pushed open the door, and with his fist doubled for a possible intruder, took a step inside the door.

There was no doubt of it. Someone was in the room. He could hear the minute sounds of clothing rubbing against upholstery, and always that quick, soft breathing.

Stepping to the electric switch, he snapped on the current. The flood of light blinded him for a second, before he saw the limp form of Audrey huddled in a great armchair by the window.

She did not look up as he stared at her, but remained crouched in the same strained position, her head bent and her body rigid.

Morton tiptoed nearer and glanced curiously at her face. It was streaked with tears, and one hand held a hard little knot of handkerchief.

"Audrey," he said. She opened her eyes with a start, and gave a little scream. "Daddy! I thought you'd never come. And I'm so wretched, so horribly wretched!" She began to cry hysterically.

Morton put his arm around her. "Now, Audrey, child, what is the matter? Why are you sitting here by an open window, when you ought to be in your bed?"

She answered him furiously. "Because you went trailing off after Nona, and let me come home alone, and I was afraid you were going to stay with her till morning. And it's almost morning, and I want to die."

Her voice trailed off into unintelligible little gutturals, and her eyes roved wildly about the room.

Thoroughly alarmed, Morton shook her shoulder. "Audrey, stop this at once! You're making yourself sick over nothing, child."

"Don't love me—no use—tired of everything"—these and other phrases came from her lips, but her eyes did not seem to see him.

She tried to arise, but her knees crumpled weakly beneath her. He caught her, and lifting the light young body, almost ran with her to the stairway and up to her room.
